AGRICULTURAL.

The Farmers.

The most important and most interesting portion of the report of the Secrery of Agriculture for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1895, which has just been made, is that which treats of the present condition and probable future of the farmers of the United States.

The statistics of the department show that by the census of 1890 there were, in the United States, 4,564,641 farms, averaging 137 acres each and valued at $13,5 000,000,000,000, an average of $2,909 each. Of the total population of the United States 26,146,000, or 42 per cent. were engaged in farming, with an average of six persons to each farm.

Now, according to the official figures, by their own labor, with an additional investment upon each f.rm of about $200 in implements and $800 more in domestic animals and sundries (making a total farm plant of $4,000), those families made for themselves during the year, out of the products of the earth, a wholesome and comfortable living. It is further shown that these same farmers "Have, with part of their surplus pro ducts, also fed all the town population of the United States, poor and lich alike. Cereals, meats, vegetables, fruits, eggs, milk, butter, cheese and poultry have been supplied the village and city markets of the United States in abund ance. It is probably safe to say that more than 40,00,000 of American citizens not living on farms have been so furnished with all the necessities and luxuries known as products of the varied soil and climate of the states and territories of the union.

"During the fiscal year 1895 the United States exported to foreign countries domestic commodities, merchandise and products aggregating in value $793,000,-000. The aggregate value of the agricultural products, included in that sum was $553,215,317. Of the total exports Europe received a valuation of $628,000, 000, or 79 per cent. of the whole.

"Thus American agriculture, after feeding itself and all the towns, villages and cities of the United States, has also sold in the outside world's markets more than $500,000,000 worth of products. So the farmers of the United States have furnished 69.68 per cent, of the value of all the exports from their country during the year 1895.

"But this large number of consumers, consisting not only of our own citizens, but of the citizens of all nations, have not been gratuitously fed, though their supplies have been constant and abundant. With sound money of the least fluctuating buying power-money on a parity with and convertible into gold the world over -- American farmers have been remunerated for their products."

What other large class can say this much? Take the 22,000,000 laborers who are not employed in farm work, but are chiefly engaged in operating railways, factories and commerce. Can they boast that they have all made comfortable livings, that they have had food enough and clothes enough for their families during the hard times that fol lowed the panic of 1893? Not by a vast deal. Of the working classes in cities many have barely survived upon their own resources, while many others have been largely supported by the charity of the people in cities. By some strange instinct, or possibly for reasons based on experience, when people fall into mis-fortune and need help, they never flock to the country, but always to the cities.

The farmers have not been charged with the burden of giving free support to millions of working people thrown out of employment. It has fallen on city populations. It is estimated by the Secretary of Agriculture that the farm products of all sorts for the past official year were worth $2,300,000,000, which is considerably less than they were officially re-ported at in 1890. Then, declares the Secretary :

"How can the 42 per cent of the population of the United States which feeds the other 58 per cent and then furnishes more than 69 per cent of all the exports of the whole people, be making less profits in their vocation than those whom they feed when the latter supply less than 31 per cent of the exports of the A great many exaggerations have been put forth in reference to the amount of farm mortgages. The Secretary's report throws the light of truth on the subject It shows that in 1890 the total amount of farm mortgages in the United States represented only 16 per cent of the value of the farms as returned for taxation. On every $10,000 worth of farm property there was an average encumbrance of only $1,600. The amount and average of farm mortgage indebtedness is less now than it was in 1890. It must be remembered always in estimating farm mortgages that a large part of them is for deferred payments on the land or its improvements. But taking the actual facts and figures the farms of the country are less incumbered than manufactures or any other class of property whatsoever.

The farmers stood the recent bard times better than any other class of our population, and their general condition has undoubtedly improved within the last few years .- Atlanta Journal.

Subsoiling.

The season for subsoiling is rapidly approaching and we give below some hints about its value. If well done it will secure a large store of moisture from the coming winter rains to tide you over the droughts of next summer.

Irrigation is not always practicable first is the scarcity of water; second, the unevenness of the land; third, lack of means to put in a plant; fourth, lack of experience and change of farm methods; fifth, the fact that in many seasons there your Town and Country Paints. olive shades, on is sufficient moisture from natural rainfall, causing enforced idleness of the condition and shows no signs of fading or plant and a return to the ordinary giving away. methods of farming. Taking all these difficulties into consideration, a writer in the New England Homestead thinks that the most practicable remedy is subsoiling.

He says: There are few if any seasons when crops could not be raised if the natural rainfall could be retained by subsoiling. It has many advantages over irrigation. A few acres can be treated each year until the whole farm has been gone over No expensive apparatus is needed. Three heavy horses can run a subsoiler sixteen inches desp in an open soil free of stone. By subsoiling twice, the second time crosswise, the ground can be stirred to a depth of twenty inches, and will hold an immense amount of water, which, instead of running off into streams, is stored for future use. Experiments the past year have shown that this treatment has doubled the yield. When the subsoiling must be repeated it can be done for half the original cost. One great advantage a young man of limited means should is that it necessitates no change in the methods of farming. This is a practical way of getting the benefits of sub-irriga. tion,-Rural World.

The Raising of Good Horses.

The price of horses has of late been so reduced that farmers are discouraged in horse raising. The low prices now prevailing are due to a want of demand, on account of the electric car system, which has been so generally established throughout the cities and some parts of the country for rapid transportation. This is, no doubt, in some part the cause of the weak demand for borses in the markets. There is, however, another cause, which will be found in overproduction. A few years ago the horse craze, as it may be called, prevailed among farmers, and there was scarcely anyone who was not breeding either first-class roadsters or blooded drivers.

For these, for a few years, first class prices were obtained, and the demand, which was at the time a fictitious one, produced by a sort of boom in horseflesh. produced an oversupply, and now there are too many horses for the market, which has for the time been somewhat diminished by the electric car lines.

But good horses are always desirable and will in the near future bring better prices than now. Farmers will understand what they need, and for awhile, perhaps, the supply will be short of the demand, but the price will again settle to a fair compensation for the trouble and risk in raising good borses. Good family horses will always be in demand in the cities and in the prospercus villages. Cars may carry men to business and women to their shopping, but there is a demand, in hours not spent in business, for a carriage horse to supply a need felt by almost every well-to-do family, that may have a restful airing in the country or in the parks and suburbs of the city. Farmers would do well to turn their at tention to raising horses to supply this want. Horses should be raised of the best blood, not for the turf, but for the price. Catalogue furnished on application. carriage, and as much care should be taken in their training for this purpose as is necessary to produce good conditioned, quiet, trusty horses, suited to driving through all the bustle and noise of the city.

This will require time and care in the trainer, but such horses will always have a good sale, and can be profitably raised. quality, $1 each, worth $1.25. Men's natural Give us good family horses and the demand will be sufficient to pay the producer a good profit.-Farm News.

We are being carried on in Germany, but is growing up into a large industry," says Lights ning, London. "A Strasburg electrician, who has been experimenting for three years, has found that with the electrical incubator 90 chickens can ordinarily be counted on out of every 100 eggs dealt

THE BEST FAMILY MEDICINE She Has Ever Known. Words of Praise from a New York Lady for AYER'S PILLS

"I would like to add my testimony to that of others who have used Ayer's Pills, and to say that I have taken them for many years, and always derived the best results from their use. For stomach and liver troubles, and for the cure of headache caused by these derangements, Ayer's Pills cannot be equaled.

When my friends ask me what is the best remedy for disorders of the stomach, liver, or bowels, my invariable answer is, Ayer's Pills. Taken in season, they will break up a cold, prevent la grippe, check fever, and regulate the digestive organs. They are easy to take, and are, indeed, the best all-round family medicine I have ever known."-. Mrs. May Johnson, 368 Rider Avenue, New York City.
